WEATHER

The Weatherspoon Art Museum, part of The University of North Carolina at Greensboro, offers rich cultural experiences for diverse audiences from the campus, community, region, and beyond.

Henri Matisse, Jeune fille accoudée au paravent fleuri (Young woman leaning on elbows before flowered screen), 1923

Since 1941, it has excited, challenged and enriched visitors with the art and artists of their time. The Weatherspoon's collection of modern and contemporary art is recognized as one of the finest of its kind in the Southeast. It also offers a vibrant calendar of exhibitions and educational programs that welcome visitors at their level of interest and experience, all geared toward understanding and appreciating the art and world around us.

We invite you to join us! When you do, you not only become part of the Weatherspoon's vibrant community, you also help support its creative work.

SPOON

COLLECTIONS

The Weatherspoon's collections span from the beginning of the twentieth century to the ever-changing present. Among the holdings are important works by modern masters such as Willem de Kooning, David Smith, Eva Hesse, Robert Rauschenberg, Andy Warhol, and Elizabeth Murray, as well as works by emerging artists who are shaping the world of contemporary art. The Weatherspoon regularly lends artworks from its collection to other museums both national and international.

David Smith, Interior, 1937

EXHIBITIONS

The Weatherspoon presents 15 or more exhibitions each year that include topical and thematic shows, surveys of individual artists' work, shows by emerging and visiting artists, and scholarly presentations of the permanent collection.

Our curators create thoughtful exhibitions that give viewers an opportunity to experience and learn from a variety of artistic approaches, periods, and ideas.

EDUCATION

Romare Bearden, Conversation Piece, 1969

The Weatherspoon's education department offers a wide range of lectures, films, artist talks, docent-led tours, family events, and outreach programs for both the university and the larger community. Most are offered free or for a nominal fee to make them available to the broadest possible audiences. Over 3,000 students participate each year free guided tours, and teachers benefit from hands-on workshops and professional development opportunities. New technologies such as cell-phone tours and an online database of the permanent collection are further extending the Museum's audience.

Summer Solstice Party

MEMBERSHIP

When you join the Weatherspoon Art Museum, you help provide rewarding cultural opportunities for all of its audiences. Whether it's K-12 field trips, the Teen Art Guide program, or lectures by both established and up-and-coming artists, your membership helps provide a gateway to creativity and to issues important to us all. And you receive special members-only benefits. Become part of a dedicated group who values the richness that the arts add to our lives. Join us and experience modern and contemporary art at its best.

CONTEMPORARY COLLECTORS

The Contemporary Collectors Group (CCG) is a special interest group open to all museum members. They enjoy invitation-only events, talks by artists, critics, and other collectors, exhibition previews, and travel opportunities to visit museums, galleries, private collections, and art fairs. Annual membership is $75 per person. For more information, please call the Museum Administrator at 336.334.5770.
